

Personality award recipient gets RM1mil to expand foundation's work

By VINCENT TAN and THOMAS HUONG

NATION 🔒
Sunday, 26 Feb 2012
12:00 AM MYT

KUALA LUMPUR: Their love for education drove Madenjit Singh and his sons to sell their cars and TV sets to get money to help poor communities learn English.

Through their Sciences For Life Studies 24/7 (SOLS 24/7) organisation, the family spread the use of the English language to even the most remote areas.

“English is a second language for almost all of these people.

“We focus on teaching our students proper grammar structure to properly construct sentences,” said Dhinu Dhanveer Singh, 29, the elder of Madenjit's two sons.

“We are expanding our centres to Tioman, Redang and other places where they are urgently needed,” added younger son Raj Ridvan Singh, 28.

* Full story in The Star today.

If you have a similar story to share e-mail us at inspired@thestar.com.my

Follow us on our official WhatsApp channel for breaking news alerts and key updates!

Subscriptions	Advertising	Company Info	Help	Policies
The Star Digital Access	Our Rate Card	About Us	Contact Us	Privacy Statement
Newsstand	Classifieds	Job Opportunities	FAQs	Terms & Conditions
		Investor Relations

Subscribe to our FREE newsletter! Subscribe